Design Group joins the PTC Partner Network

Partnership leverages PTC's technical capabilities for Design Group clients

ST. LOUIS — Oct. 29, 2019 — Barry-Wehmiller Design Group has announced that it has joined the PTC Partner Network with authorization to resell Windchill, PTC's product lifecycle management (PLM) software, and ThingWorx, PTC's industrial Internet of Things (IIoT) platform. With this new partnership, Design Group is uniquely positioned to deliver innovative and value-added solutions for its clients by leveraging industry experience, domain expertise and technical capabilities.

Design Group—the rapidly growing engineering, consulting and technical services division of Barry-Wehmiller—provides enterprise technology and other consulting services for the world's leading companies in various key sectors, including industrial and advanced technology. With PTC, manufacturers, partners and developers can capitalize on the promise of IIoT and augmented reality technology, and drive the future of innovation.

Through the PTC Partner Network, companies can innovate with leading technologies, collaborate with partners and clients, and benefit from digital transformation opportunities. By joining, Design Group will be able to offer its clients access to complementary solutions and services to expedite their design, development, implementation and production time.

“Our partnership with PTC will enable Design Group to accelerate our clients' digital transformations by combining PTC's world-class software products with Design Group's rich history of providing technical services to a wide range of industries,” stated William Fricks, Design Group Partner. “We are excited for the potential to create additional value for our clients.”
